MONEY OFFERED FOR JUVENILE COURT

It begins to look very much now as if Judge Whitney would win out in the fight he has been making for several years, and Honolulu have a real juvenile court, in a court building put up or re-modeled for the purpose, with a regularly appointed juvenile magistrate.

Consequent to the publication some days ago of an interview with Judge Whitney, in which he suggested that Honolulu Hale be turned into a juvenile court, Whitney has received three offers of very substantial contributions from people who are interested in the work of making Honolulu a place without any bad boys and are willing to back their interest with their money.

Postmaster Joseph Pratt wrote a note to Whitney, saying that he was much interested in the plan advanced by the ex-Police Court magistrate and would be glad to contribute $50 toward the erection on the site of Honolulu Hale of a building for the juvenile court. He suggested that the lot be parked and room left next to the post-office for the receiving and taking away of the mails.

Two other persons, who for the present wish to remain unknown, have written offering $100 apiece toward the proposed building.

"I have no doubt at all," said Mr. Whitney this morning, "that if the Governor will approve of the plan, at least $2500 can be raised by public subscription for the erection of a juvenile court on the present site of Honolulu Hale. As soon as it was suggested that this building be torn down, I thought of the place as a suitable location for the court. I have been trying for several years to get a separate building for the juvenile court. I want a place where the boys on probation can report to the probation officers instead of having to go to the homes of the officers. If they had a regular place to report, the matter would seem more important to them and the effect would be better. The principal probation officers now are Mr. Rath, Mr. Rider and Father Steven.

"A year or two ago I asked Governor Carter to allow me to use the upper story of Honolulu Hale as a place where the boys could report, and he granted the permission asked, but when I came to look the place over I found that it leaked all over. Mr. Holmway examined it and said it would cost at least $2,000 to repair it, so, as the money was not available, the idea had to be given up.

"At present there is no regularly appointed juvenile magistrate except that the law passed by the Legislature of 1905 gives the District Magistrate power to act as such. We are at work on a new law which we hope to get passed by the next Legislature, which will provide a separate juvenile court, with a regularly appointed juvenile court judge. The idea is to have one of the other judges, perhaps one of the Circuit Judges, Judge Lindsay, for instance, appointed juvenile judge. He could meet the boys in the juvenile court at some regular time, say Saturday morning.

"Honolulu has few real bad boys, and I don't like to have them shut up in the jail. And I didn't like, when I was District Magistrate, to send them to the denominational schools. It looked too much as if we were trying to proselytize them."

Judge Whitney spent a good deal more time and worked a good deal harder trying to do what he could for the boys of Honolulu than many people had any idea of. His methods were practically the same as those used by Judge Lindsay of Denver, who is known all over the country for what he has done for the boys of Denver.

Governor Frear, when told of the three offers to contribute toward the construction of a juvenile court building, was apparently much pleased and expressed the hope that there might be other offers of a similar nature. Honolulu seems to be in a fair way to get this much-needed institution.

SPANIARDS ARE

SAYS MONSARRAT,

MAKING GOOD HELP

Reports that come in from those in a position to know, regarding the Spaniards recently imported for work on the plantations, state that they are giving every satisfaction. In fact, according to Julian Monsarrat, of the Kapapala Ranch, these people from Spain are exceeding his expectations. They are willing and sincere in their endeavors to please. Mr. Monsarrat says that it takes more than a slight shower to drive them from the field. In his opinion they are far superior to the Filipinos, whose object in life seems to be to get out of as much work as possible and to lay off on the least provocation.

The local immigration officials are busy examining the Japanese immigrants who arrived on the steamship China last Saturday from the Orient. There were many Honolulu Japanese at the immigration station this morning awaiting for their turn to be called. They were in the main the purported husbands of the Japanese women who had arrived. Some of them have not seen their wives, except in photographs.

SECRETARY'S OFFICE LOOKED LIKE A NURSERY

So much of Secretary Mott-Smith's time of late has been taken up with examining witnesses in the matter of the issuance of certificates of Hawaiian birth that he has been obliged to set a limit to the time he will devote to this work. Hereafter birth certificates will be issued and the work connected with them transacted only on Tuesdays and Fridays.

Almost every day last week the Secretary's office was crowded with Chinese children and their parents. It seems as if every Chinese who is the father of a child born in the Islands has suddenly made up his mind to get the child registered, and they have been coming up in droves. The Secretary's office looked like a nursery. Children crawled about the floor, hung onto the legs of the tables—and the Secretary. They chattered in Chinese if they were old enough and cried for their dinner if they weren't. And every last one of them was dressed in his best bib and tucker—and so were their parents.

A proud father and mother were in being examined, and the mother was on the stand, when suddenly the youngster set up a howl that might have aroused Rome. It was evidently hungry. In fact, it had been snatched away from its dinner when the mother was called upon to testify. With a horrified look the father grabbed the child and made for the outer corridor, where he paced nervously up and down and waited for the mother to come out and pacify the indignant baby.

WAIHAWA WATER CO. WANTS LAND REMNANTS

W. W. Goodale, on behalf of the Waihawa Water Company, which has made application to be allowed to purchase a number of remnants of Government land in Kaunakakai gulch, below the dam, was in conference with Governor Frear and Land Commissioner Pratt this morning with reference to the matter. There are in the neighborhood of 400 acres of this land, mostly in small patches. Only 40 or 50 acres are tillable.

The matter was turned over to the surveyor to have a survey made so the authorities may know just how much of the land there is.
